

THREESIXTY ARCHITECTURE

Our sports practice is at the forefront of stadia and arena design with projects nationwide. 360 Architecture specializes in the planning and design of sports facilities, and is consistently rated among the best in the industry for creative solutions to challenging site, operational, budget, schedule and revenue-generation issues. Our senior principals have been at the forefront of the national sports design industry for more than 20 years. With a staff of 130 (48 of whom specialize in sports) and some of the most impressive resumes in sports architecture, 360 is fully equipped to lead a large scale project from inception through occupancy.

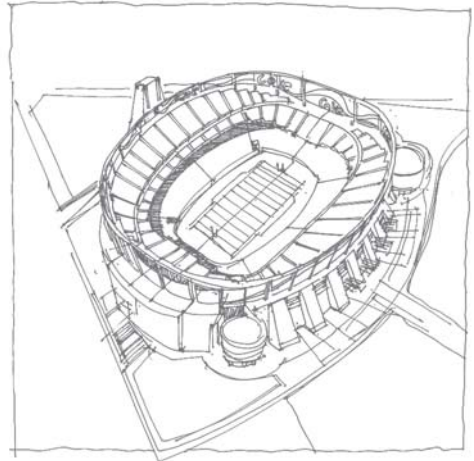

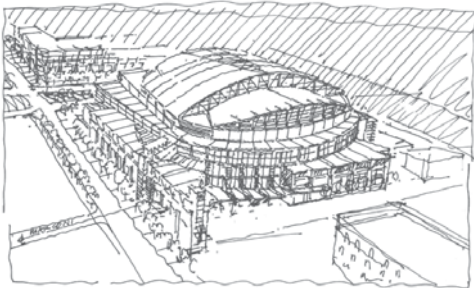

Our philosophy is that no two venues offer the same opportunities or pose the same challenges; therefore, each solution needs to be different. We are recognized for responsible yet creative and unexpected designs for both new and renovated arenas and stadia. Prominent projects include New Meadowlands Stadium for the NFL Giants/Jets, Oakland A's Cisco Field, Sprint Center Arena (as part of Downtown Arena Design Team), Columbus Blue Jacket's Nationwide Arena, Bank of Kentucky Center at NKU, and University of Louisville's new practice facility. Whatever the size or scope, we see each project as the project of a lifetime, especially for its community, deserving of the highest levels of skill, talent and commitment. Our expertise encompasses arenas, stadia, sports facilities within entertainment districts, mixed-use, corporate, civic and higher education developments.
